JANE AUSTEN (1775-1817) is the author of six novels and among the most widely-read authors of English literature today, known for the biting social commentary of her romantic fiction. Austen's heroines navigate the class and gender politics of marriage, family, and the social order of Britain at the start of the 19th century.

ELLIE FABE is a writer and artist, with a BFA from the University of Michigan School of Art (1983). She lives in her hometown of Cincinnati with her husband and their two sons. Her watercolor-collages, which have been shown throughout the Midwest, explore memory — its details and the icons that trigger it — by pairing vintage imagery with the immediacy and movement of watercolor.

Praise for Pride and Prejudice

“A MUST FOR Pride and Prejudice fans...The witty juxtaposition of haughty 1930s fashion models, debonair smokers and sporty types, an the all-American housewives and mothers of Hoover, Frigidaire and Kenwood ads, produces a remarkably apt visual interpretation of Jane Austen's words.”

- Joceline Bury, Jane Austen's Regency World Magazine

“Fabe makes Pride and Prejudice come alive in ways possibly never before rendered in the visual arts. Her project is entirely unique and completely successful.”

- Daniel Brown, AEQAI
